In Support of HACHR

Editor:
Bravo to Thadeus Greenson for giving a human face and heart to HACHR (“Flash-point,” Aug. 2). They treat some of our most vulnerable outcast citizens with compassion and dignity. Addiction is a terrible illness that strips people of their self-worth. Extending a helping hand to another human being in need is never a bad thing. Thank you HACHR, our community needs you!

Eucalyptus sheds?

Editor:
Regarding the removal of eucalyptus trees along the future bike trail between Arcata and Eureka, I have an idea for an alternative (NCJ Daily, Aug. 2).
Along the railroad line through the Sierras there are structures called “snow sheds.” These are essentially roofs — some quite lengthy — over sections of track that lie below avalanche-prone areas to prevent blockage of the track in the winter. I wonder if anyone has considered the possibility of putting a roof over that relatively short stretch of future bike trail that some are concerned about? Obviously there would be expense involved but cutting and disposing of hundreds of dead trees will also have a cost. Since that section of trail isn’t projected for construction for a couple of years, that would allow time for fundraising and solicitation of donated materials and perhaps volunteer labor.

There may be good reasons why this would not be feasible, but it seems worth consideration. It seems draconian to me to cut down hundreds of trees that are a local landmark just because someone can cite an instance where a tree limb fell on a bicyclist somewhere in Alabama or wherever six years ago.

Robert C. Van Fleet, Burnt Ranch

‘Outside the Box’

Editor:
Much has been said about our community’s iconic eucalyptus trees. They are a touchstone for all of us in Humboldt. I rarely agree with Michelle McKeegan or Bill Pierson; on this they are on point calling to leave those trees alone.

Public works is using the scare tactic of falling limbs as a ploy to justify their over reaction for “safety.” They use an example of falling limbs from a site 400-plus miles away to justify their concern.

If there were a real danger, Caltrans would have removed those trees years ago. I bicycle that section of U.S. Highway 101 four-plus times a week and drive it almost daily. Caltrans maintains those trees in a safe condition. Tree removal is a solution looking for a problem. The real solution is tree maintenance on the trail side, not removal.

Our well-compensated county planning and public works officials once again have demonstrated a failure to think creatively and “Outside the Box.”

Correction

A story headlined “Flash-point” in the Aug. 2, 2018 edition of the North Coast Journal contained inaccurate information about the rates of people living with hepatitis C in Humboldt County compared to the rest of the state and the nation. Humboldt County’s infection rates are three times that of California and five times the national average. The Journal regrets the error.

Defense argues potential Humboldt County jurors may be biased against Marci Kitchen

By Thadeus Greenson

thad@northcoastjournal.com

The last time a criminal trial was moved out of Humboldt County, George W. Bush was president, Barack Obama was just a junior senator and Donald Trump was still six years from recording the first episode of The Celebrity Apprentice.

The year was 2002, and Dianna Mae Preston, then a 58-year-old Trinidad woman, had surrendered to police after ambushing Kevin R. LaPorta in a parking lot outside his business, shooting him four times, then following him into a Chinese restaurant to shoot him twice more, killing him. Preston, who'd carried out the murder under the mistaken belief that LaPorta had molested her granddaughter, was dubbed the “vigilante granny” and the story captured national headlines, ultimately prompting Superior Court Judge Timothy Cissna to rule that Preston couldn't get a fair trial in Humboldt County, spurring the trial's move to Napa County.

In the years since, Humboldt County has seen plenty of high-profile cases, from Blue Lake police Chief David Gundersen facing two dozen charges of drugging and raping his wife, to Gary Bullock torturing and murdering beloved local priest Eric Freed, a crime that garnered international news coverage. But in every case since Preston's, judges have determined the defendants could get a fair shake with a local jury.

Humboldt County Deputy Conflict Counsel Meagan O'Connell is now looking to change that, reportedly having filed a motion arguing the court will be unable to find a fair and impartial jury for her client, Marci Kitchen, who faces charges of gross vehicular manslaughter while intoxicated, based on allegations that she was driving drunk when she fatally struck two 14-year-old girls — one of them her daughter — on Eel River Drive on July 12, 2016 and fled the scene.

Kitchen's case has transfixed and outraged many in the local community since news first broke that the girls — Kiya Kitchen and Faith Tsarnas — were dead and Kitchen was the suspect. But whether the intense news coverage will warrant moving Kitchen's trial remains to be seen, and will ultimately be up to newly seated Humboldt County Superior Court Judge Kaleb Cockrum.

Marci Kitchen

As of press time, the Journal had been unable to obtain a copy of O'Connell's motion, filed Aug. 2, from the courts or attorneys involved in the case. But we do know that a research firm was doing telephone opinion polling of Humboldt County residents in the weeks prior to the filing — the type of research generally necessitated by such a motion.

University of California Hastings College of the Law professor David Levine said it's important to remember that judges are incredibly reticent to move trials for a variety of reasons, meaning the defense generally has to go to extraordinary lengths to show that the particular circumstances of a case, news coverage of it and community sentiment necessitate the move.

There are a number of reasons judges are reluctant to grant change of venue motions, according to Levine. First, there's the ideal that defendants are to be judged by a jury of their peers, and there's no better peer group than the local community. Second, he said, holding a trial in a different county can deprive local community members — including friends and family of the accused and the victims — of the chance to attend, while also burdening another county's jurors with hearing an out-of-area case. Finally, moving a trial is an expensive, cumbersome proposition that will undoubtedly burden both the local court and the court the trial is moved to.

When a judge grants a change of venue motion, he or she is required to notify the state Administrative Office of the Courts, which then recommends two or three counties to possibly host the trial. According to a fact sheet from the Administrative Office of the Courts, the agency looks for communities with similar demographics — ideally close to the court from which the trial is being moved — that would not be "unduly burdened" by taking the trial. The local judge then hears arguments from attorneys in the case as to where the trial should go and decides on a venue he or she thinks will provide a fair and impartial jury, and that can accommodate the impacts of the trial.

Levine said it's important to remember that when a trial moves, the attorneys and judge move with it. Kitchen's trial is slated to span six weeks, making for a lengthy out-of-town stay — and added expenses — for everyone involved. Witnesses will also be subpoenaed and have to travel to testify, incurring more expense for the court. Levine said the Administrative Office of the Courts would also likely look to move the trial to another rural area — noting that it would be odd to move a trial from a rural area to someplace like San Francisco. But most of the state's rural courts are stretched thin, making it difficult for them to devote a courtroom for six weeks to another county's trial.

Consequently, Levine said judges generally put a pretty high burden on the party requesting the venue change. He said it's not enough to show a case has received widespread publicity — the question isn't whether potential jurors know about the case, it's whether they can put aside what they've heard or read about a case to make a judgment based solely on the law and what's presented in court. Consequently, Levine said a successful change of venue motion generally needs to demonstrate three things: that there has been inordinate and pervasive coverage of the case, that said coverage has inflamed the local community and that there is scientific polling data showing that it will be tremendously difficult to find 12 impartial jurors.

Levine said a strong motion would include an overview of the coverage, with a special focus on any information that has been ruled inadmissible at trial or coverage that was deemed to be inaccurate. Then it would also include community reaction to that coverage — letters to the editor, online comments and social media posts — illustrating that

May 10, 2017 — Judge John Feeney finds there is sufficient evidence to hold Marci Kitchen to stand trial.

Feb. 28, 2018 — Marci Kitchen's private attorneys Patrik Griego and Ben Okin withdraw from the case after she runs out of money to pay them. The county's conflict counsel's office is appointed to represent her.

Aug. 2, 2018 — Marci Kitchen's new attorney Meagan O'Connell files a motion seeking a change of venue.

Aug. 27 2018 — A hearing is scheduled on the change of venue motion.

Sept. 4, 2018 — Marci Kitchen's trial is tentatively slated to begin, if it remains in Humboldt County.

the community has become prejudiced toward the defendant. Finally, he said, the motion would include some kind of scientific polling data quantifying the extent to which a randomly selected group of potential jurors know about — and have formed opinions about — the case.

In late July, some North Coast residents received calls from the market research firm Research America inquiring about the Kitchen case. The calls included questions about respondents' media habits, news they'd seen about the Kitchen case and opinions they'd formed about her guilt, as well as a couple of specific aspects of the case. A representative from Research America declined to tell the Journal who commissioned the survey or what it would ultimately be used for.

Levine said this type of polling can ultimately serve a dual purpose. While designed to assess bias in the jury pool, he said the polls can also give attorneys valuable information about strengths and weaknesses in their case, as well as insight into how to identify potential jurors who are likely to be favorable to the defense.

Moving forward, Cockrum is scheduled to hear the change of venue motion Aug. 27. While he could grant or deny it outright from the bench, Levine said judges frequently deny these types of motions without prejudice pending jury selection. In Kitchen's case, this means Cockrum could opt to try impanelling a jury locally with the idea that if a majority of potential jurors demonstrate bias, a potential change of venue would still be on the table.

Looking ahead, Levine said he thinks O'Connell faces an uphill battle to move Kitchen's case out of Humboldt County.

"It's usually pretty tough — judges just don't want to do it," he said, underscoring that the motion — and the polling that likely came with it — are important tools for a defense attorney looking to impanel the most favorable jury for his or her client. "Jury selection, it's a very delicate and very important point in a trial. It's a chess game and who ends up in that jury box makes a huge difference."

It's also worth noting that a change of venue in no way ensures a positive outcome for the defense. In Preston's case, a Napa County jury of nine women and three men convicted her of premeditated murder. She's now 74, serving a life sentence without the possibility of parole at a state prison in Corona.

The Cannabank of California

By Thadeus Greenson

thad@northcoastjournal.com

What to do with all that cannabis cash is a problem North Coast growers have faced for decades, leading to tales of six-figure sums buried under chicken coops, violent home invasion robberies and stacks of often-stinky hundreds entering the registers at Costco.

Well, in many ways, Humboldt's problems have become California's, with the state scrambling to figure out how to manage a multi-billion dollar, cash-only industry, considering everything from deploying a fleet of armored cars to collecting cash tax payments to creating a public bank.

That last option got a sizeable boost last week when State Treasurer John Chiang announced that he has commissioned a firm, the San Diego-based Level 4 Ventures, to conduct a feasibility study on the concept.

"This study aims to settle the lingering critical question about whether a public cannabis bank is possible," Chiang said in a press release. "And if it is determined to be feasible, the report will place in our hands what amounts to a set of blueprints to design such a bank and make it fully operational."

The problem with cannabis cash is that banks in the United States are federally regulated and most deposits are backed through the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. This means the financial institutions can potentially be federally prosecuted for conspiracy or money laundering charges if they knowingly take deposits from marijuana businesses, as the drug remains listed as a Schedule 1 substance under the Controlled Substances Act. This has been enough to scare almost all the nation's large banks away from working with the cannabis industry, leaving most dispensaries accepting only cash payments and many businesses making payroll with stacks of bills. In addition to this posing serious security concerns, it also leaves the vast majority of the industry unable to secure small business loans and effectively takes billions of dollars out of circulation, leaving them to sit in safes rather than finance loans and mortgages.

Some see a public bank as a viable option, one that's not only tantalizing to the cannabis industry but also to lawmakers looking to finance public infrastructure projects and even Occupy Wall Street types who want to see the financial industry wrested away from for-profit institutions that pushed the nation into the Great Recession in 2008.

The basic idea of a public cannabis bank would work like this: It would be set up by the state to take deposits from city and state tax revenues, giving it a firm capital base stretching well into the billions of dollars. It could then leverage those deposits by making loans to local public works improvements, small businesses and affordable housing projects, growing the initial capital while also spurring economic growth and community improvements. With a steady stream of tax revenue coming in, the bank could also guarantee deposits from cannabis businesses and business owners without federally insuring them, theoretically sidestepping federal regulation and the risk of prosecutions or asset forfeitures.

In addition to Chiang's exploration of a state public bank, the concept will also be on the ballot this November in Los Angeles, where Mayor Eric Garcetti signed off on an initiative that would "allow for the establishment of a municipal financial institution or bank." If the measure passes and the bank comes to fruition, it would be the first created by a city or state in a century, since the Bank of North Dakota opened in 1919.

Opened as part of a populist movement and spurred by concerns that East Coast banks were cheating local farmers, the Bank of North Dakota opened its doors with a single depositor: the state. Acting as a clearing house for state tax revenue, the bank offers low-interest loans for infrastructure projects and every year transfers its profits into the state's general fund to be reinvested into state services.

Chiang has asked Level 4 Ventures to return its report by Dec. 1, the same deadline for a separate report Chiang is collaborating on with the Attorney General's Office to assess the legal ramifications of making such a move.

"Disruptive change and bold innovation require more than grandiose aspirations," Chiang said in the press release. "They demand real-world pragmatism, data-driven solutions and well-crafted blueprints to show how to translate dreams into reality. These two studies will enable policy makers to make informed decision on whether to move forward or not on a public cannabis bank."

There's certainly a lot to like about the potential for such a bank. First and foremost, it could bring cannabis cash out of the shadows, increasing public safety and oversight, while also allowing that cash to have the reverberating impact most other private sector income does. It could also help the world's fifth largest economy exercise its autonomy and leverage its wealth, all while sending less public money to Wall Street. ●

Crabs Season is Over, Everything is Garbage

Well, folks, it's over. Humboldt's best summer distraction has come to a close and now we are all forced to confront the empty misery of our Crabs-less existences. No more heckling, no more Crusty, no more dynamic renditions of "Go Big Red," no more band at all! Baseball has abandoned Arcata, not to return for 11 months. It's always a difficult week after our boys head back home. The town feels ... empty. F Street is no longer a perilous route that only the most courageous and resolute dare ford. We've no place to gather together and bond as a community. It is a time for mourning and bereavement.

The Humboldt Crabs finished the season with a series sweep against the Bay Area Blues, an all-star team on the eastern side of the bay.

Our boys ended up 37-10 on the year and unloaded 19 runs in the final game of the season, an explosive display on par with the fireworks Saturday night.

The Blues had a nifty little patchwork thing going, where each player wore the jerseys of their league team. Friday night, they trotted out a lineup almost entirely composed of "Oaks" players. Only the center fielder and catcher were not, both hailing from the San Carlos Salty Dawgs. Our Crabs were chaperoned by players from the McKinleyville Little League who ran out with them as they first took the field.

Eight-hundred-and-eighty-six people hunkered down for the Crab Grass Band's final night-show and they were exceptional. Connor Blair had perhaps his best game of the season Friday, knocking in four RBIs, including a soaring two-run freeway ball.

The Crabs stormed out of the gates, scoring eight runs in the first two innings and hung on to finish with a 12-6 victory.

Saturday night was important for three reasons: 1) the Blues had their first and only series lead, 2) fireworks and 3) we had a bat girl! She was a huge fan favorite and someone donated money so that next year the Crabs can get a "BG" (Bat Girl) jersey.

While the Blues jumped out to an early one-run lead, the Crabs' Bronson Grubbs answered with a leadoff double of his own. Grubbs almost immediately stole third and, before you knew it, he was sauntering home on a pass ball to tie the game. And from there on out it was all Crabbies, who cruised to a 9-4 victory and a 2-0 series lead.

Sunday, Sunday, Sunday! A bittersweet day indeed. Few things are more fun than

ROTR 2018

The dancehall artist Cham took the stage at a notably smaller Reggae on the River this weekend at French's Camp. matinee Sunday baseball, but it was the final Sunday. Crusty threw out the first pitch, a clawball with some real funk on it, and the band played the National Anthem. It was an efficient and tight performance; the best kind one can ask for.

Andrew Najeeb-Brush was tapped to start the last game of the year and threw seven strong innings, duping the Blues into hitting a hurricane of ground balls. Grubbs led the Crab charge on the offensive side, going 4-6 with three RBIs. Nearly all of the 12 Crabbies who stepped to the plate got a hit, and the Crabs scored a run in every inning of their 19-6 victory — the first time they'd accomplished the feat this season.

It was a great sendoff for the players and fans alike.

Murder-Suicide: Eureka police are investigating an apparent murder-suicide after a man and woman were found dead in a residence on D Street on Aug. 3 after someone requested a welfare check. Responding officers reported finding the two deceased with "lacerations," with the male's appearing to be "self-inflicted," according to EPD, which hadn't released their identities before the Journal went to press. POSTED 08.07.18

Pedestrian Fatality: A 29-year-old man was fatally struck on southbound U.S. Highway 101 north of Herrick Avenue the evening of Aug. 4 after apparently running into traffic. The California Highway Patrol reported the man ran directly into the path of a driver who was unable to avoid him. The man was later pronounced dead at St. Joseph Hospital. The driver was not impaired, according to CHP, and toxicology tests on the pedestrian remain pending. POSTED 08.04.18

Teen Found Dead: The Humboldt County Sheriff's Office continues to investigate the death of 18-year-old Hunter Allen, of Eureka, who was found dead before dawn Aug. 1 along U.S. Highway 101 north of the Humboldt Hill exit. An autopsy was scheduled for Aug. 8 to determine Allen's cause of death but the investigators are treating the death as "suspicious." They ask anyone with information about the case to call 445-7251. Hail to the Best

Unlike the transfer of inherited titles, the breakdown of voting for the elected is always an opportunity for introspection. Best of Humboldt is no different, though less dire. Pride ourselves as we do on individuality, there are some definite trends in our collected opinions. Take for example our most voted category: Best Burger. The hottest contest, decided by only a dozen or so votes, was for Best Ice Cream. In fact, take the top 16 most voted categories — all food, from grocery stores to grilled cheese sandwiches. And No. 17? Best Dispensary.

So we may be a little hedonistic in our interests (flip ahead to Best Hobby Shop, if you don't believe me). But, credit where it's due, Humboldt gives credit where it's due. Just peruse this year's court of winners, crowned by Journal readers — they've all got loyal followings who happily fly their banners. If history is any indication, we'll be getting an earful from the fans of their rivals in the coming weeks. And next year those winners will have to earn and defend their titles all over again. Such is the battle for the crown.

Best Chinese Restaurant

Annie's Cambodian Cuisine

1917 Fifth St., Eureka

Really? Cambodian is literally in the name of the restaurant, folks. "Our food is similar to Thai food but it's not as spicy as Thai," says Chin Chau. "We have a few items that are almost like Vietnamese food," he adds, noting that Cambodia is situated between those two Southeast Asian countries. But the closest thing to Chinese food on the menu at Annie's Cambodian Cuisine, the beloved Eureka restaurant Chau has owned with his wife Annie since 2011, is probably the cheese puffs, which, while dreamy, are not actually Chinese. Whatever. Try their family recipes for gingery fish amok, lemongrass stir fry or phlea beef salad and you'll agree the place deserves an award for something.

Chin and Annie immigrated to the U.S. from Cambodia in 1980 and 1981, respectively, as war refugees. They did stints in Thai and Philippine refugee camps before meeting in San Francisco. Any day but Sunday, when it's closed, you'll see Chin or Annie cooking in a cloud of steam in the back. Anything you order will be delicious, with the alternately bright and earthy flavors of the Kingdom of Cambodia. Just don't go looking for kung pao.

—Jennifer Fumiko Cahill

Annie and Chin Chau, owners of Annie's Cambodian, voted Humboldt's Best Chinese Food. Seriously. Amy Waldrup

Best New Restaurant

Campground

865 Ninth St., Arcata

Dan and Pam Willey, owners of Arcata's Campground, voted Best New Restaurant.

Amy Kumler

Campground is on fire. The woodsman-chic "Argentine-inspired steakhouse" has quickly earned a solid reputation. Less than a year ago, owners Pam and Dan Willey, who came to Humboldt by way of Colorado and also run Arcata's Salt Fish House, expanded their empire only blocks away with chef Michael Aguilera cooking up a focused menu of fire-grilled foods — right down to the Beck's bread they flame-toast for brunch.

What to order? Dan himself orders the New York strip and the grilled peppers stuffed with carnitas. And if the restaurant runs out of the trickier-to-source prime dry-aged steaks, you might take a look at the dry-aged duck breast. Your server is ready to help, which is important to him. "Service," he says, "is what you do to somebody. Hospitality is how you make somebody feel."

Best Buffet

Tandoori Bites

1735 Fourth St., Eureka

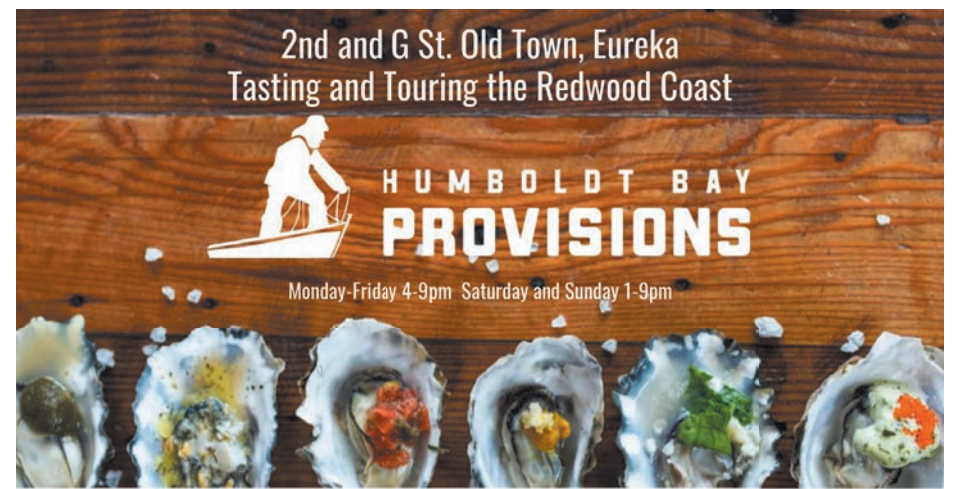

Gupreet Sohl is no fool. Four years ago, he took over the run-down Indian restaurant in a building his father owned, gave it an interior makeover and opened Tandoori Bites. The hard part about starting an Indian restaurant in Humboldt, however, is getting a chef to move here. Sohl, who hails from the northern Indian province of Punjab, enlisted a distant cousin also from the region, Dalbir Singh (only 19 at the time), to turn out the buffet of ever-changing, northern-style curries, pilafs and pakoras fit for a Maharaja. Good thing, too, as Sohl says he "can't boil an egg." It's no surprise the spread of genuinely juicy tandoori chicken, rich goat curry and cloud-like naan won Best Buffet, especially when you can gorge at lunch for $11.97. It's also the only game in town for Indian food — if he didn't own the place, Sohl would be hiking to the Bay Area for take-out. See? No fool.

A colorful advertisement for Surfside Burger Shack. The background is light blue with green wavy lines. At the top, it says "Thanks for Voting Us the Best" in a large, stylized font. Below this are three photos of food: onion rings, french fries, and a burger. To the left of the onion rings and fries are the words "ONION RINGS" and "FRENCH FRIES" in red, with red arrows pointing to the respective photos. To the right of the burger photo is the word "BURGER" in red, with a red arrow pointing to the burger. Below the burger photo is the word "HOT DOG" in red, with a red arrow pointing to the burger photo. At the bottom, there is a logo for "SURFSIDE BURGER SHACK" featuring a shark's head. Below the logo, it says "445 5TH ST EUREKA 707.268.1295" and "OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK". At the very bottom, there are social media icons for Facebook and Instagram, with the handles "@SURFSIDEBURGERSHACK" and "@SURFSIDE_BURGERSHACK" respectively. A quote at the bottom right says "That's one epic lineup!" in a cursive font.

Best Dive Bar / Best Bartender

The Shanty / Mike Vitiello

213 Third St., Eureka

Humboldt County's Best Bartender, Mike Vitiello, of The Shanty, which also took honors as Best Dive. Amy Waldrup.

As the old saw goes, in the land of the blind, the one-eyed man is king. And in the land of the occasionally blind drunk, one wants a just and kind ruler who blends the power of exile with the promise of fair treatment in the sacred pursuit of a good time. Mike Vitiello at The Shanty is one such leader.

"Any monkey can pour a drink," Vitiello tells me, after pouring this monkey one. "But a real bartender has to control the bar, make sure everyone is having a good time. This is a comfort zone for my customers: no fights, no intolerant language, no creepy behavior. I want everyone to feel safe and have fun. If I didn't work here I'd be drinking here myself."

Simple words and a righteous ethos. All hail the king.

— Collin Yeo

Best Mimosa

The Greene Lily Café
307 Second St., Eureka

In 1925, a bartender in Paris topped a flute of Champagne with orange juice and, voila, the bubbly mimosa was born. Around the same era, Lillian Greene, a mother of 13, surely knew how to flip an omelet. Yet, she dreamed of opening an eponymous speakeasy — perhaps someplace quiet where she could enjoy a drink. In 2015, these two stories were forever mixed by Charity Desbrow, Greene's great-granddaughter and the owner of the Greene Lily Café in Old Town. Alongside hearty eggs Benedicts and fluffy French toast, Desbrow serves at least six flavors of mimosas, plus seasonal options like watermelon and dragon fruit. Reasonably priced at $3.95 each, readers voted the Greene Lily the unrivaled queen of breakfast cocktails.

Best Venue / Best Band / Best Musician

The Jam / Object Heavy / Pete Ciotti

915 H St., Arcata

Heavy on the brow lies the triple crown. And what dark hand guides the power and ascension of kings? I don't really know. But for drummer Pete Ciotti, the hand that guides him is a busy one indeed. With a new album by his constantly performing group Object Heavy — produced by Kelly Finnegan of Monophonics — in the works and a serious attempt to put on a show a night at The Jam, which he co-owns with his family, all the while bringing his in-house pizzeria to a fully realized dream, the man is active indeed. He is also surprised and humbled by his wins: "It's an awesome experience to be appreciated by your customers and your peers ... This is the most amazing community I've ever been a part of."

Keep it up, Pete.

Best Tattoo Artist + Best Jewelry Store / Best Bathroom

Luis Lopez (of Primal Decor)

1908 Myrtle Ave., Eureka

Maybe we're just a bit more traditional than we thought, perhaps even a bit prejudiced. Whatever the reason, we'll own up to the fact that we were shocked when readers weighed in to tell us that a tattoo parlor is home to the best bathroom in Humboldt County — and the best jewelry store. (It is also home to Humboldt's best tattoo artist, Luis Lopez, but we found that less surprising.) But stepping inside the funky, turquoise building on Myrtle Avenue, we found our readers' judgment to be on point. We were greeted with floor-to-ceiling lit glass cases displaying an assortment of high-end jewelry. Yes, there were the ear gauges and body piercings that might make grandma squirm, but there were also plenty of earrings you could imagine her donning for a nice dinner out, providing, of course, that your grandma is hip and stylish with some organic Humboldt flair.

And then there's Lopez, who has been inking people up at Primal Decor for the better part of two decades. Owner Jason Whitcomb says Lopez is dedicated to improving his craft and is adept at fine line work and shading. But what really makes him stand apart, Whitcomb says, is that he can deliver whatever a customer happens to request. "I would say that he's the kind of guy a customer can bring just about any design to and he can bring it forth on their skin."

Oh, and the bathroom? It's spotless and pleasant. And there's a bidet.

So ... Best Hobby Shop? In defense of our voters, it does rain A LOT here. And this year's award might be a better fit than last year's Best Adult Clothing win. (I guess everybody was thinking adult adult.)

But the 35-year-old shop, with its cheeky window displays, won its following with a staff that's up to outfit you for your particular indoor hobby needs from lingerie (up to K cup) to an "electro wand" that carries a pacemaker warning. Humboldt State University lecturer and clinical psychologist (and former Journal sex columnist) Melinda Myers is their proprietress queen, but manager Kate "superkate" Knight acts as her champion. She says Good Relations offers "only as much shame as you enjoy." You'd also have better luck making a Buckingham Palace guard belly laugh than getting the slightest blush out of these ladies. Knight grins at the award category. "It's good to have hobbies."

Best Photographer

Babies. They grow up so fast. Those soft, sweet, fleeting moments of tiny fists, knee wrinkles, fuzzy shoulders and teeny lips seem to slip away right before every parent's eyes. Local photographer Kelsey Marchi helps preserve the preciousness of those moments by arranging and taking portraits of babies in the first two weeks of their lives so new parents can cherish them for years to come.

It's a job she describes as the best ever: "I get to snuggle brand new babies and capture these moments and tiny details for their family. I joke with parents that I get to snuggle babies all of the time, but I get to sleep at night. The best of both worlds."

Sleeping sluggers clutching baseballs while lounging in Giants jerseys, lil' farmers out in the field taking breathers in between rounds on the old John Deere, tiny beauties snug as bugs swaddled in white linens and crowned with soft rose petal headbands. These are just a few of the creative and endearing poses Marchi captures.

When asked about the biggest challenge of photographing infants, Marchi answers, "Giving them back to their parents when they're all done." Awww. It's obvious that this photographer and mother of two's love of what she does and her attention to the "little" things is why people voted her Best of Humboldt.

Meet our neighbors: Jim & Judy Martin

Jim and Judy Martin are long time Cutten residents that have been visiting Murphy's Market Cutten for the last 51 years. "I remember the location before it was Murphy's. We have always been loyal to that location and it has never let us down," explains Jim. Jim and Judy are now both retired, Jim from Caltrans and Judy from Eureka Family Practice. They now enjoy hanging around the house, attending church activities, and spending time in the garden.

"I personally think that Murphy's has the best deli in Northern California," exclaims Jim. "We do most of our grocery shopping there," adds Judy. "They are always so helpful and the people that work there always know our names," explain Jim and Judy. "Murphy's is also great with special orders and everything gets there so fast."

So next time you are in the Cutten area, make sure to stop by Murphy's Market and grab something from the "best deli in Northern California." If you see Jim and Judy, make sure to say hi.

Best Yoga Studio

Pali Yoga

The allure of Pali Yoga stems from the Eureka studio's namesake, Rupali Brown, who was born and raised in Mumbai, India. After spending a few years working in an animation studio, work that she found "stimulating mentally" but left her "feeling incomplete and physically unhealthy," Brown found yoga. In time, she met Ben Brown, the "love of her life," in a yoga ashram in India. Now raising two young kids, the couple runs Pali Yoga, where they offer a variety of classes with the philosophy that "each class is a one-of-a-kind experience and is informed by the conviction that all bodies are unique and there is no one way a pose should be practiced."

The studio offers about a dozen classes a week, from Vinyasa flow to Hatha, including a half-hour lunchtime class built to fit busy work schedules. Classes run $10 apiece for drop-ins and $90 for a 10-class pass. There are also packages — $30 for three weeks of unlimited classes for new students or an unlimited monthly pass for $65 — for those looking for more studio time. They're flexible.

— Thadeus Greenson

Michelle Seelye /
Humboldt Patient Resource Center

980 Sixth St., Arcata

At the Humboldt Patient Resource Center (HPRC), the staff has been earning the respect of caregivers and farmers since 1999. While carrying a host of new recreational products, the dispensary continues to work toward higher goals for the community. In 2018, HPRC opened a health center in a vacant building in Eureka, dubbing it The Connection (334 F St., Eureka), and offering fitness, nutrition and personal growth classes.

And this year, Humboldt readers crowned HPRC's Michelle Seelye as the best budtender in the land. On a recent visit to her castle, Seelye was busy helping a nearby customer: "Sex?" he asked. Without skipping a beat, Seelye rolled off her top strains for libido with the solemnity and compassion of your family doctor. A budtender who pulls no punches — that's a Humboldt queen.

Nat Pennington, owner of Humboldt Seed Co.

In prohibition days, the seed-to-sack journey was intentionally mysterious. Post-legalization, hipsters haven't wasted any time asking, "Is it local?" While plants might be harvested at grandma's farm, what about their source? Pragmatism and profit have pushed many cultivators toward clones, allowing a jump on harvest and low- to no-cost starts. But if untraceable pesticides/fungicides can show up in the final product, it doesn't fly in the regulated marketplace.

Enter the Humboldt Seed Co., which readers deemed the seeds of royalty in 2018. All products are Clean-Green certified and guaranteed to germinate and grow. Along with original strains like Royal Kush and Humboldt Sour Diesel, the company works closely with bioscience researchers, developing new strains with optimal characteristics and verified origin. Says founder and CEO Nat Pennington, "Our isolated breeding chambers make it so the seeds produce very consistent plants. So the snozberries really smell like snozberries."

Humboldt is chock full of artsy types and do-it-yourselfers. It's our can-do spirit that enables us to survive out in the wide rural unknown. We can also get a little antsy with our artsy, independent selves out here in the sticks. The combo makes us the perfect clientele for Humboldt's newest hot spot, Arts and Drafts.

Owners Tracy and Bryon Dorgan transformed the 4,000-square-foot space located in the historic E. Janssen Building in Old Town into a thriving gathering spot. With high ceilings, plank floors and splashes of color throughout, it is the place to get your drink and your think on with creative and fun events like Sip 'n Paint Night (Distinguished Cats of Humboldt or Bob Ross Edition, anyone?) or Craft Singles: A Cheesy Trivia Night where one can match wits while matching partners. Patrons can enjoy the whimsical side of themselves — unleashing their inner Picassos while sipping wine, craft beer and cider, or nonalcoholic beverages at such events as Christmas in July, where people made cool glass ornaments using alcohol inks, or the Feel The Burn "Unicorn Edition" Wood Burning Extravaganza. Stop by for Lego Tuesdays or Onesie Wednesdays, where showing up in your best (?) and softest casual wear will get you a $1 off pints all night, and see why NCJ readers voted this "drinking place with a crafting problem" the Best New Business in Humboldt.

Ten Items or Fewer: Grocery Outlet Edition

What to hunt for on the ever-changing shelves

By Jennifer Fumiko Cahill
tabletalk@northcoastjournal.com

Life at Grocery Outlet is like a box of discount promotional chocolates: You never know what you're going to get or if you'll ever see it again so you binge and grab twice as much as you came for.

Sure, plenty of people turn their noses up at a cruise among the random cans and overstock runoff. Even fans quibble about which branch is the nicest/least sketchy. But there are deals, y'all. And in their pursuit is the thrill of the hunt, discovery and a chance to practice living in the moment with gratitude for what this strange and fickle universe lays before us.

When we asked our readers on social media what their go-to purchases are at the three locations in Humboldt (625 Commercial St., Eureka; 1581 Central Ave., McKinleyville; 1085 S Fortuna Blvd., Fortuna), more than one said it was a trick question, given the chain's constantly rotating inventory. And yet there were oft-mentioned faves. Here's what we found on a recon mission in Eureka.

Wine and beer. But especially wine.

Many a wine snob has told us they've heard of folks who would buy a dirt-cheap bottle, taste it in the parking lot and hoard more if it was good. Handy apps like Vivino, which scans labels and pulls up ratings, simplify scouring the small labyrinth of bottles. An employee tipped us off to the popular Pythian Rock cabernet sauvignon for half its usual price at a mere $5.99. And while paying $5.99 for official One on One chardonnay from The Bachelorette might not be your finest oenophile moment, it's less shameful than the suggested $15.99. The discount for Le Merle's saison Belgian-style ale wasn't as steep at $7.99 for a four-pack but the selection of craft brews (including some out-of-season winter beers) piqued our interest.

Organic fruits and veggies. Are there handmade baskets tumbling forth at the elbow of the farmers who raised them? No, friends. But there are armfuls of organic peaches for $4.99 and similarly cheap vegetables. The spread won't woo away any farmers market devotees but it takes the sting out of it for those who are, real talk, just going to let that head of lettuce wilt and liquify in the crisper anyway.

Meat. Folks sing the praises of affordable, if mercurial, beef cuts. We got a tip on a two-pack of organic tenderloin steaks for $8.99. Are they the filet mignon you had at Moonstone Grill? No, but they are tasty grilled up with a little salt and pepper on a weeknight.

Fancy cheese. The affordably priced hunks, buttons and slabs lure one out of a rut to try something new. We picked up sharp English cheddar, a small log of goat cheese and a wedge of herbed jack for between $2 and $3 each. And just like that, "I'll bring the cheese" is now your easiest and most economical party option.

Ice cream. Mochi ice cream ($3.49) was a frequently cited must-have among regulars and I will admit to a genuine spike in adrenaline upon seeing frosty canisters of Talenti gelato for $1.99. Cinnamon peach biscuit. What kind of D-list flavor was this? Did we want to roll the dice on a rejected flavor? Reader, we did. And we were rewarded with something like a late summer pie à la mode. Life is about taking risks.

Frozen food and vegetarian stuff. The frozen aisles are formidable and there's a solid (sorry) selection of vegetarian foods here. In the center of those overlapping Venn diagram circles are the stacks of Amy's macaroni and cheese. At $2.49 it's still a splurge in comparison to the sad boxed variety but live your life already.

Beauty aisle scores. It's tough to think beauty under the fluorescent lights but die-hards swear this is the place for the

Yes To line of creams, shampoos and cleansers at 50 percent or more off, along with other fancy soaps and lotions. We picked Yes To Blueberries face cream for $5.99, a schmancy lavender Pierre's Apothecary hand soap for $3.99 and a bottle of EO Essentials body oil ($6.99 with essential oils that are honestly too relaxing for a newsroom).

Chips and snacks. We spotted organic cheese puffs, sea salt chips and peanut butter-filled pretzels, but it was a glittering bag of lurid, vermillion Hawaiian Luau Barbeque Rings with enough flavoring to make a bag of Takis squint that got us. They were only $1.99. Send help.

Cookies. There is a rotating bevy of imported and oddball biscuits, from Swedish gingersnaps to Italian cream wafers. But the sentimental choice is Daddy Ray's fig bars, a nondescript block of which will set you back only $1.99 and return you to childhood.

All the candy. Our tour ends at the very id of the store, a place of slashed prices and broken resolve. We scooped up Jelly Belly's misfit Belly Flops ($2.99), a massive bar of Belgian chocolate with sea salt ($3.99) and a two-pack of almond roca in a box that inexplicably reads "To Fabulous Las Vegas, Nevada" ($.79). And why not? What happens in the Grocery Outlet candy aisle stays in the Grocery Outlet candy aisle.

Hot off the Press

Bug Press brings Amplifier Foundation's We the People project to the streets

By Gabrielle Gopinath

artbeat@northcoastjournal.com

Photographs and video from the Families Belong Together march held in downtown Eureka on July 30 stand out for the snappy graphics of the homemade signs marchers carried from “Zero Tolerance for Human Rights Abuse” to “Stop the Racism! Stop the Deportations!” and “Who’s the Illegal Alien, Pilgrim?”

As thousands of protesters marched and made the news, blogosphere think pieces heralded the rebirth of the hand-made protest sign. This proudly low-tech vehicle for personal expression is experiencing something of an Instagram renaissance as protesters compete to craft brief, witty slogans, posting pictures of especially cute, funny, scathing or memorable signs in the hopes one will go viral. And even as this storm of DIY creativity has been unleashed, protest events have become venues where certain artists are able to propagate meme-ready designs.

One poster that appeared at the Eureka march showed a tiny, beaming child wearing a sun hat and carrying a bouquet, emanating rays that illustrated an essential innocence and grace. The legend reads: “We are human. Stop the raids. Immigration Reform Now.” The image looked familiar. I recognized it as one by Los Angeles artist Ernesto Yerena.

A red, white and blue placard bearing the striking likeness of a woman wearing a hijab patterned with the stars and stripes, captioned “We the People,” also induced a double take. Was that one of the Harmony and Discord series of color lithographs famous street artist Shepard Fairey had made at New York City’s Pace Prints several years ago?

I asked around to discover how recent graphic works by nationally prominent artists were taking to Eureka streets. It turned out this had a lot to do with Arcata printer Bug Press, which had posted images of graphics by Yerena and Fairey on social media that morning with the cheery caption: “We are printing a limited number of these posters for free at the end of today. Come and pick them up!”

Press owner Robert Arena, who has been printing in Arcata since 1972, sees this work as an extension of the nonprofit endeavors he and his associates have carried out for years alongside the press’ commercial work. Past projects have included online archives and photo exhibitions. The most recent is a curated collection of historic shots from the 1930s by the likes of Dorothea Lange and Walker Evans, accompanied by quotes that compare inequality during the United States’ Great Depression with rising levels of inequality in American society today. “We put it out at the beginning of December, the time of year when disadvantaged people are hardest hit,” the low-key Arena observed mildly, allowing, “It was a critical comment.”

The press’ long-running program of free poster art reflects another approach to public service. Some months, Arena prints works by local artists. In other months, he and his staff reproduce historic works of poster art. May and June of this year featured prints by Maureen McGarry, whose plein-air watercolor landscapes evoke the terroir of rural Ireland. For July and August, the press is featuring 20th-century railroad posters harkening back to the golden age of British Railways design. “If you’re making it in some way, you’ve got to give back,” Arena said. “It’s important to make people aware of the beautiful parts as well as the bad parts of the place where they live.”

Taking part in a public art project called We the People, started by the Seattle-based Amplifier Foundation, was another way to foster public dialogue. Amplifier, a nonprofit arts organization founded by National Geographic photographer Aaron Huey, describes itself as “a design lab dedicated to reimagining and amplifying the voices of social change movements through art and community engagement.”

The project, “a nonpartisan campaign dedicated to igniting a national dialogue about American identity and values through public art and story sharing,” involved commissioning artists to design posters, making downloadable files of these works freely available and distributing prints at public events in selected

Ernesto Yerena's poster produced in collaboration with the Amplifier Foundation.

cities. It was inspired by the messaging tactics of the street artist Fairey, one of the project participants. (Fairey is well known for the iconic poster image he created for the 2008 Obama campaign — the one with the caption reading “HOPE.”)

Lissie Rydz of Bug Press said that the decision to collaborate with Amplifier “came from our realization that at this political moment, there was a demand in the community for images that would convey a sense of solidarity against injustice and hate.” The press made its first such images last year in direct response to public demand when clients came to the press requesting posters for the Eureka Women’s March.

“An older lady came in and asked us to make her a sign; she brought in a cover of Time magazine with a Trump caricature, and said she wanted it printed so she could carry it in the march. She knew exactly what she wanted,” Rydz remembered. Workers at the press “decided to print a few extra” that day, since demand was evident.

“Wanting to produce images that respond to the needs of the community and coming up with various different ways of doing this, can be a challenge,” Arena observed. “At the same time, it’s important to not become identified with a particular partisan group or faction: We’re a business, not a political action group.” He pauses, lost for a moment in contemplation. “It’s rewarding work. But it’s also a delicate balance.” ●

Bug Press makes prints of artwork by selected local artists freely available on an ongoing basis. The Press will be displaying historic British Railway travel posters in their front gallery windows and giving away prints through August. Posters designed by Ernesto Yerena and Shepard Fairey in collaboration with the Amplifier Foundation are also available for free while supplies last. Visit Bug Press at 1461 M St. in Arcata or see www.bug-press.com for details.

Not in Kansas

HLOC's The Wizard of Oz

By David Jervis

frontrow@northcoastjournal.com

James Gadd, Hannah Davis, Ty Vizenor and Tristan Roberts hit the Yellow Brick Road for HLOC.
Submitted

Director Victor Fleming's 1939 film adaptation of The Wizard of Oz, when one thinks about it, may be the most famous ever made. Its characters, lyrics and even throwaway lines have endured as iconic for eight decades, entered the global lexicon and, in some cases, even become rather tired clichés.

It's possible modern audiences don't even know that the story is taken from a turn-of-the-20th century children's book by L. Frank Baum. Long since fallen out of copyright, the story has been adapted into a myriad of theatrical versions. The one now being staged by the Humboldt Light Opera Company isn't a crack at the West End musical version by Andrew Lloyd Webber a few years back but the adaptation done by the Royal Shakespeare Company in 1987.

And this version is a pretty straight-ahead telling of the story from the film, complete with the songs known to all and others you may remember less well. It's a roaring success in its scale, cast and technical proficiency. HLOC's past two big summer productions, Ruddigore and Phantom of the Country Opera, were adequate but not rousing wins. But The Wizard of Oz, under the sharp direction of HLOC vet and current artistic producing director Carol McWhorter Ryder, succeeds where those fell short.

Having a space as large and acoustically dynamic as Humboldt State University's Van Duzer Theatre is certainly a built-in advantage for such an ambitious staging, with a cast of more than 80 people and many technical challenges. Characters fly on wires more than 20 feet off the stage at times and the challenges of set decoration and special effects are pulled off impressively.

Should any of you for some bewildering reason need a primer on the basics here, our story begins in Depression-era Kansas. Young girl Dorothy (Hannah Davis, outstanding in the lead and with a great voice) is being raised by her Uncle Henry (Barry Priestly) and Auntie Em (Shaelan Salas Rich) on their farm. Starting to sound familiar? There's also the matter of Dorothy being harangued by meddlesome and haughty neighbor Miss Gultch, almost entirely over the matter of Dorothy's beloved small dog, Toto. Canines are notoriously difficult to control onstage and overly excited by musical numbers, but the solution this show comes up with for Toto's part is too good to share here. And no, it's not someone in a dog suit.

It may be somewhat odd that what's considered the movie's trademark song, "Somewhere Over the Rainbow," appears first, just as in the movie — not at all the opening number that might logically kick off a musical tale. But Davis' rendition is amazing and she does a brief reprise of it later in the play (the reprise was filmed for the movie but didn't make the final cut). As the movie makes the shift from Kansas to Oz, the eye-popping production numbers play just as well as they did in the flatter visual medium of film, and Ryder and the huge all-ages cast do great work with the Munchkinland number, just as with the massive logistics of the "Merry Old Land of Oz" number in the second act. As Gilda, aka the Good Witch of the South, Fiona Gadd Ryder (Ruddigore) possesses an awesome voice and range, and does well with a relatively smaller role as she quite literally often floats in and out of the action.

As the story moves along, we meet the Scarecrow (Ty Vizenor), the Tinman (James Gadd, a wicked tap dancer) and Tristan Roberts as the Lion, who brings just enough, and maybe really eventually too much, hamming up to the role. Along with Wicked Witch Katri Pitts (HLOC's Cinderella), they get some great comic bits that haven't all aged perfectly in 80 years but work well overall.

And enough cannot be said about the technical credits, from both the design of the sets to the superb costume design by Carol Ryder, Liz Sousa and Kevin Sharkey. The flight choreography by Lewie Long, with an assist from flight captain Carl McGahan and his crew, flawlessly sends people soaring and gliding up high and landing safely.

The Wizard of Oz comes nicely to life onstage and steps loose from being just an iconic film. Creative touches here — including talking trees, poppies in human form and hovering singers dressed in crow costumes — aren't things you can get in the movie. Plus you get the satisfaction of seeing the Wicked Witch railing at her minions about their damned repetitive chant.

The Humboldt Light Opera's production of The Wizard of Oz plays at the Van Duzer Theatre on the HSU campus on Fridays and Saturdays at 7:30 p.m. through Aug. 18, with Sunday matinees at 2 p.m. on Aug. 12 and Aug. 19. For more information, call (707) 630-5013 or visit www.hloc.org.

Setlist

Best of This Week's Music

By Collin Yeo

music@northcoastjournal.com

There's a lot of music going on this week and with no real dull times to be had, so I won't waste your time with a long intro. Sun's out, guns out, boys and girls. It's the dog days of summer and there is fun to be had every night after the beaches and rivers are too cold to enjoy. Remember to travel safe, wear something warm in the evenings and enjoy yourselves whatever you are doing. And for those long beach days, don't forget the one indispensable accessory: a T-shirt. You'll never sunburn your shoulders and, in a just world, large tees would be all we'd ever need wear by the bright waves. Have a fine week.

Thursday

"Big" Sam Williams is a trombonist — as I have mentioned in this column before, the eternal child in me prefers the term tromboner — who was a key player for many years in the legendary New Orleans group the Dirty Dozen Brass Band, as well as an ace session man tapped by superstars like Dave Matthews and Elvis Costello. For the last 15 years, however, he has toured with his superlative act Big Sam's Funky Nation, staffed by a crack team of NOLA heavies dedicated to the big horn funk gospel that makes that city an eternal beacon of greatness. You can gain access to that greatness at Humbrews tonight at 9:30 p.m. ($10). If you really want to dance your ass off like the lighthearted, mad and happy fool I used to be when I lived around the corner from Tipitina's on Tchoupitoulas Street, don't miss this one.

Friday

Kikagaku Moyo — whose name translates from Japanese to Geometric Patterns — is a Tokyo-based psyche band and I know what you are going to say: Japanese psyche bands are a dime a dozen these days, touring liberally since the heydays of the Boredoms and Zeni Geva. However, unlike those glorious noise-mongers, this group works more in the softer tone and arrangement arena of sound, going so far as to feature a sitar player in its string-heavy lineup. The results are like strolling through a stunning aural garden full of neon-candied bees and I really dig it. You can come find out for yourself tonight at the Miniplex at 9 p.m. ($10). Drag City Records act Wand opens.

At the same time, northeast of the Mad River, there is a free show happening at The Logger Bar with a trio of locals. The Monster Women join forces with Strix Vega and the crepuscular Mister Moonbeam for a starlit sock hop by the mythical lake of Blue.

Saturday

It's a busy night in Arcata with a few shows to get through, so I'll take a deep breath and hey-ho let's go. First off at 7 p.m. at the Outer Space Eureka rock acts Leone and The Tweeners meet up with Arcata's palm tree pop band The Apollo Era for an early all-ages gig valued at $5.

Over at the Miniplex at 9 p.m. musical puppeteer David Liebe Hart returns to town to toss out outer limit laughs with local comedy coevals Dr. Foxmeat, Evan Vest, Joshua Barnes and Matt Redbeard. ($12/$10 advance).

At the same time at Humbrews, there is a collaboration between Hollow Down and local open mic collective Word Humboldt. ($5). Join DJ Goldylocks and various spoken word artists for an open mic recital that will morph into a rock show at a time indeterminant.

And, finally, at 11 p.m. The Alibi has a free show going down on the dark side of the bar with Portland's all homogametic hard rock act Blackwater Holylight. Come on out.

Sunday

Olympia, Washington, is represented at the Sanctuary tonight as bluegrass trio The Pine Hearts opens the evening's musical entertainment at 8 p.m. ($5-$20 sliding scale). Headlining the night will be fellow Olys The Lowest Pair — I won't tell you what the eternal child in me thinks of this name — a folksy banjo-ed duo known for intimate songs and sets.

Monday

The Outer Space hosts an East Coast rock showcase at 7 p.m. as Jersey City's Long Neck weds its lo-fi sound to the clashing and earnest noises of Brooklyn's Fern Mayo — whose name was maybe taken from Judy Greer's character in the late '90s cult flick Jawbreaker. Fine in-house trio Blood Hunny is the local curio on display. ($5).

Tuesday

RampArt skatepark continues bringing the noise with another night of heaviness at 7:30 p.m. This time around it's a package tour of three bands headlined by the Bay Area's GWAR-esque death metal act Ghoul. San Francisco's War Bison fills out the undercard along with Portland's queer-core act Clitterati. Unholy Oriface plays a song of local color. Admission is $15 and there will be a beer bar for those of you old enough to buy tobacco in California.

Marley mania is sweeping the 101 corridor this week as Rita and Bob's youngest son Stephen "Ragga" Marley performs tonight at the Mateel at 8 p.m. on the eve of his older brother Ziggy's concert at the Van Duzer. Joining him will be his daughter DJ Shacia Payne. ($35).

Wednesday

The family tradition rolls on tonight at the Van Duzer Theatre as Ziggy Marley kicks off the 2018-2019 Center Arts season at 8 p.m. Continuing on the path of his father's legacy, the Jamaican musician has become an icon in his own right. ($66, $25 students). ●

Full show listings in the Journal's Music and More grid, the Calendar and online. Bands and promoters, send your gig info, preferably with a high-res photo or two, to music@northcoastjournal.com.

Collin Yeo forgot to include a tagline this week but surely meant to say his editor Jennifer Fumiko Cahill is a goddess walking among us. He lives in Arcata.

Home is Where the Art Is

Painted utility boxes, colorful murals, more artists per capita than any other place in California ... Eureka, art has found it! The city by the bay is about to get a bit splashier as local and international artists set upon its streets and liven them up with new murals and art during The Eureka Street Art Festival, Aug. 11-18 (free).

Old Town will grow brighter and more visually diverse all week with the creation of more than 15 new pieces of artwork — focusing primarily on Opera Alley, which runs between Second and Third streets. Participating artists include visitors Cix (Mexico City), Elle (New York), Xavi Panneton (Oregon) and Dave Van Patten (Long Beach). Local artists include Anna Sofia Amezcua, Phyllis Barba, Julie McNeil, Blake Regan, Stock Schlueter and Rachel Schlueter. In addition to the artists creating all week, the festival will also feature art talks, events and daily mural tours at 5:30 p.m. leaving from the Black Faun Gallery. On Saturday, Aug. 18, the festival culminates with the Opera Alley Street Party from noon to 6 p.m. to celebrate the completion of the work (free). Check out the finished artwork, as well as live painting, while cruising the three beer gardens, a Kids' Zone with crafting activities brought to you by SCRAP Humboldt, face painting and chalk art, and live music and performances by Bandemonium, the Synopsis Aerial Collective, Barnett and the Boys, the James Zeller Trio, 707 Band, the Cold Light of Day and various DJs.

Cliffs Notes

The coastal town of Trinidad draws and inspires artists of all types to its rugged cliffs and shimmering waters. Look around town and you'll find art galleries, gift shops, a museum and library all housing some of the inspiration found here. And for spectacular landscape, you are surrounded as far as the eye can see — sweeping vistas of Trinidad Bay and the Pacific Ocean, flowered trails, wind-shaped trees, beaches and state parks.

It is the perfect setting for a music festival offering some of the finest musical talent in the world. The Trinidad Bay Art and Music Festival, or TBAM, now in its second year, brings internationally renowned classical musicians to intimate venues in town to perform for the next two weekends, Aug. 10-12 and Aug. 17-19.

All 30 of the musicians have Humboldt connections. They were either born here, lived here or reside here now. There's the Friction Quartet, featuring Kevin Rogers and Otis Harriel on violin, Taija Warbelow on viola and Doug Machiz on cello. Solo stars include pianist Daniela Mineva, cellist Peter Kibbe, violinist Ann Morris and marimbist Christina Cheon, and soprano Lucy Fitz Gibbon performs with her spouse, pianist Ryan MacEvoy McCullough. Wind Energy features Jill Petricca on flute, Michael Kibbe on oboe, Paul Cummings on clarinet, Aaron Lopez on bassoon and Anwyn Halliday on horn. And violinist Terrie Baune, cellist Carol Jacobson and pianist John Chernoff come together to form Temporary Resonance Piano Trio.

Individual shows are $30 but full-festival passes are available, too. For all the performances, see the Calendar or get a full rundown, including composers, pieces and ticket information, at www.tbamfest.com.

Eighth Grade

Long Lost

Triplets, adolescence and undercover exes

By John J. Bennett
filmland@northcoastjournal.com

THREE IDENTICAL STRANGERS. There are stories, obscured by the complacency and subterfuge of modern life, that retain the power to surprise and amaze. Some, through exploration, become chilling reminders of what we do not and cannot know about the world and, more importantly, the people around us. Three Identical Strangers has become one of the more talked about movies of the year because it takes on one of those very stories. The story's the thing and director Tim Wardle's movie illuminates it just enough to make us curious about its darker, just-distant reaches without ever exploring them.

Strangers opens with a dramatization (somewhat painfully in the style of Errol Morris) of past events, wherein a young man from Long Island goes away to college in 1980, only to encounter a campus full of people who seem to already know him. He, Robert Shafran, as it turns out, is the identical twin of Eddy Galland, who attended the same college. They were separated and adopted when they were 6 months old, their adoptive families kept ignorant of each others' existence. The story became medium-big regional news, at which point they became aware of their third identical brother, David Kellmann. And then it became big news.

The story is too contingent on the "reveal" to get further into plot points here, but safe to say this: For as much as Strangers gives us, it introduces so many questions and eludes to such sinister motives — all of which are left fundamentally unaddressed — that it's more frustrating than anything else. PG13. 147M. MINIPLEX.

EIGHTH GRADE. Kayla Day (Elsie Fisher) isn't stick-skinny. Her skin isn't perfectly clear. She isn't effortlessly charismatic. She doesn't have many friends. She knows these things about herself. It's the last week of eighth grade and the world is a goddamn minefield. And, in writer-director Bo Burnham's (he's known to many as the teenager whose piano-comedy YouTube videos made him a stand-up star) debut feature, that week of navigating dangers is distilled into 93 minutes of wringing despair and breathless exhilaration. Adolescence is rendered art with compassion and authenticity that is, at least in contemporary cinema, unparalleled.

There is, of course, a long and likely boring conversation to be had about the lives of young people as rendered in the movies, going back to Satyajit Ray's Apu Trilogy and the French New Wave (particularly Francois Truffaut's contributions), through to Harmony Korine and Larry Clark's over-esteemed but still-important Kids (1995). Eighth Grade is and should be a part of that continuum.

More to our purpose here, Burnham's movie (which belongs just as much to Fisher, fearless and perfect in the part) is consummately watchable. Equal parts diary of a week and an astute examination of growing up in the age of social media, it remains compelling throughout. It's shot and lit with obvious care, bursting with color, conveying the delicious, impending sunburn feel of summer stretching out before us with the camera. It captures the brilliance and terror, the impossible immediacy and immensity that define the emotions of a certain age. It gets real and raw, but is also defined by compassion, so it never feels manipulative or jokey. It doesn't fumble in attempts to shock (see: Kids). As perhaps in life, Eighth Grade will break your heart but you'll smile while it's happening. R. 93M. BROADWAY, MINOR.

THE SPY WHO DUMPED ME. Maybe this is presumptive or preemptive, but I find even the title problematic. (For what it's worth, I was really looking forward to this one). I get the pun and that's all well and good. But for a movie starring women (Mila Kunis and Kate McKinnon), co-written and directed by a woman (Susanna Fogel), a title that objectifies the lead before we've even met her seems to be working at cross purposes. But maybe that's reading too subtextually.

Audrey's (Kunis) semi-mysterious boyfriend Drew (Justin Theroux) has just broken up with her. By text. Her oddball best friend Morgan (McKinnon) tries to cheer her up with a birthday party. It's the thought that counts but the whole thing's a bust. And so they head home to burn Drew's stuff. Shortly thereafter, Audrey and Morgan become embroiled in international intrigue set in motion by the absent Drew, who, of course, is some sort of secret agent. (The background plot, the stuff of who works for which corrupt agency and why they're all at odds, is frustratingly under-developed). They jet off to Prague, where the plot serves mainly to lob up premises for not-well-enough-executed action set-pieces and not-funny-enough comic two-handers.

Kunis is a more formidable actor than she gets credit for and McKinnon is, of course, one of the great modern genius weirdos. But neither of them really ever hits her stride in this one, reaching as it does for kinetic, ultra-modern movie violence and gendered high-comedy without hitting the marks for either. *R. 116M. ## Previews

DOG DAYS. Intertwined stories of Los Angelenos who share a love of pooches.

EATING ANIMALS. Natalie Portman narrates a documentary about American animal agriculture based on Jonathan Safran Foer's memoir. Maybe skip the butter on your popcorn. NR. 94M. MINIPLEX.

THE SLENDER MAN. Teen girls summon the internet-driven urban legend to rescue their friend. PG13. 93M. BROADWAY, MILL CREEK.

Continuing

CHRISTOPHER ROBIN. Pooh gets real with Ewan McGregor as the boy from the books. PG. 104M. BROADWAY, FORTUNA, MILL CREEK, MINOR.

HOTEL TRANSYLVANIA 3: SUMMER VACATION. Dracula and his posse try to unwind with a cruise. What's the worst that could happen? PG. 97M. BROADWAY.

THE INCREDIBLES 2. This fun, clever and funny sequel is worth the wait, with the returning cast and the right villains for our times. Craig T. Nelson and Holly Hunter. PG. 118M. BROADWAY.

JURASSIC WORLD: FALLEN KINGDOM. Nodding to its predecessors and balancing humor, horror and heart, this dino sequel is more than a big, dumb blockbuster. PG-13. 128M. BROADWAY.

MAMMA MIA! HERE WE GO AGAIN. A fun jaunt to Greece with Cher, Meryl Streep, a whopping 16 ABBA numbers, a wedding, reunited octogenarian soulmates, unplanned pregnancies and Pierce Brosnan unfortunately singing again. PG13. 114M. BROADWAY, MILL CREEK.

MISSION: IMPOSSIBLE-FALLOUT. A lean, engaging return for the MI team, led by Tom Cruise's Ethan Hunt. Excellent stunts, fights and effects raise the bar in this sixth and best installment of the franchise. PG13. 147M. BROADWAY, FORTUNA, MILL CREEK.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF
GERALD PATRICK RENNER
CASE NO. PR180179

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of GERALD PATRICK RENNER, GERALD P. RENNER, GERALD RENNER, JERRY RENNER

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Petitioner Patricia M. Renner

In the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt. The petition for probate requests that Patricia M. Renner be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by court. THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on August 30, 2018 at 2:00 p.m. at the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt, 825 Fifth Street, Eureka, in Dept.: 6. IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate

Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

Free Will Astrology

Week of Aug. 9, 2018

By Rob Breznsky

freewillastrology@freewillastrology.com

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Palestinian American writer Susan Abulhawa writes that in the Arab world, to say a mere “thank you” is regarded as spiritless and ungenerous. The point of communicating gratitude is to light up with lively and expressive emotions that respond in kind to the kindness bestowed. For instance, a recipient may exclaim, “May Allah bless the hands that give me this blessing,” or “Beauty is in the eyes that find me beautiful.” In accordance with current astrological omens, I propose that you experiment with this approach. Be specific in your praise. Be exact in your appreciation. Acknowledge the unique mood and meaning of each rich exchange.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): According to my analysis of the astrological omens, you need this advice from mythologist Joseph Campbell: “Your sacred space is where you can find yourself again and again.” He says it’s “a rescue land . . . some field of action where there is a spring of ambrosia — a joy that comes from inside, not something external that puts joy into you — a place that lets you experience your own will and your own intention and your own wish.” Do you have such a place, Taurus? If not, now is a great time to find one. If you do, now is a great time to go there for a spell and renew the hell out of yourself.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): When he was 20 years old, future U.S. President Thomas Jefferson had an awkward encounter with a young woman who piqued his interest. He was embarrassed by the gracelessness he displayed. For two days afterward, he endured a terrible headache. We might speculate that it was a psychosomatic reaction. I bring this up because I’m wondering if your emotions are also trying to send coded messages to you via your body. Are you aware of unusual symptoms or mysterious sensations? See if you can trace them back to their source in your soul.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): There’s a zone in your psyche where selfishness overlaps generosity, where the line between being emotionally manipulative and gracefully magnanimous almost disappears. With both hope and trepidation for the people in your life, I advise you to hang out in that grey area for now. Yes, it’s a risk. You could end up finessing people mostly for your own good and making them think it’s mostly for their own good. But the more likely outcome is that you will employ ethical abracadabra to bring out the best in others, even as you get what you want, too.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You probably gaze at the sky enough to realize when there’s a full moon. But you may not monitor the heavenly cycles closely enough to tune in to the new moon, that phase each month when the lunar orb is invisible. We astrologers regard it as a ripe time to formulate fresh intentions. We understand it to be a propitious moment to plant metaphorical seeds for the desires you want to fulfill in the coming four weeks. When this phenomenon happens during the astrological month of Leo, the potency is intensified for you. Your next appointment with this holiday is August 10th and 11th.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): In her poem “Dogfish,” Virgo poet Mary Oliver writes, “I wanted the past to go away, I wanted to leave it.” Why? Because she wanted her life “to open like a hinge, like a wing.” I’m happy to tell you, Virgo, that you now have more power than usual to make your past go away. I’m also pleased to speculate that as you perform this service for yourself, you’ll be skillful enough to preserve the parts of your past that inspire you, even as you shrink and neutralize memories that drain you. In response to this good work, I bet your life will open like a hinge, like a wing — no later than your birthday, and most likely before that.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Libran fashion writer Diana Vreeland (1903-1989) championed the beauty of the strong nose. She didn’t approve of women wanting to look like “piglets and kittens.” If she were alive today, she’d be pleased that nose jobs in the U.S. have declined 43 percent since 2000. According to journalist Madeleine Schwartz writing in Garage magazine, historians of rhinoplasty say there has been a revival of appreciation for the distinctive character revealed in an unaltered nose. I propose, Libra, that in accordance with current astrological omens, we extrapolate some even bigger inspiration from that marvelous fact. The coming weeks will be an excellent time for you to celebrate and honor and express pride in your idiosyncratic natural magnificence.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): “Maybe happiness is this: not feeling like you should be elsewhere, doing something else, being someone else.” This definition, articulated by author Isaac Asimov, will be an excellent fit for you between now and September 20. I suspect you’ll be unusually likely to feel at peace with yourself and at home in the world. I don’t mean to imply that every event will make you cheerful and calm. What I’m saying is that you will have an extraordinary capacity to make clear decisions based on accurate appraisals of what’s best for you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): I’ve compiled a list of new blessings you need and deserve during the next 14 months. To the best of my ability, I will assist you to procure them. Here they are: a practical freedom song and a mature love song; an exciting plaything and a renaissance of innocence; an evocative new symbol that helps mobilize your evolving desires; escape from the influence of a pest you no longer want to answer to; insights about how to close the gap between the richest and poorest parts of yourself; and the cutting of a knot that has hindered you for years.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): “It has become clear to me that I must either find a willing nurturer to cuddle and nuzzle and whisper sweet truths with me for six hours or else seek sumptuous solace through the aid of eight shots of whiskey.” My Capricorn friend Tammuz confided that message to me. I wouldn’t be surprised if you were feeling a comparable tug. According to my assessment of the Capricorn zeitgeist, you acutely need the revelations that would become available to you through altered states of emotional intelligence. A lavish whoosh of alcohol might do the trick, but a more reliable and effective method would be through immersions in intricate, affectionate intimacy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Not even five percent of the world’s population lives in a complete democracy. Congratulations to Norway, Canada, Australia, Finland, Ireland, Iceland, Denmark, New Zealand, Switzerland, and Sweden. Sadly, three countries where my column is published — the U.S., Italy, and France — are categorized as “flawed democracies.” Yet they’re far better than the authoritarian regimes in China and Russia. (Source: The Economist.) I offer this public service announcement as a prelude to your homework assignment. According to my astrological analysis, you will personally benefit from working to bring more democracy into your personal sphere. How can you ensure that people you care about feel equal to you, and have confidence that you will listen to and consider their needs, and believe they have a strong say in shaping your shared experiences?

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Mystic poet Kabir wrote, “The flower blooms for the fruit: when the fruit comes, the flower withers.” He was invoking a metaphor to describe his spiritual practice and reward. The hard inner work he did to identify himself with God was the blooming flower that eventually made way for the fruit. The fruit was his conscious, deeply felt union with God. I see this scenario as applicable to your life, Pisces. Should you feel sadness about the flower’s withering? It’s fine to do so. But the important thing is that you now have the fruit. Celebrate it! Enjoy it! ●

Vlad, Vampires and Dracula

By Barry Evans

fieldnotes@northcoastjournal.com

Don't think it's easy being a vampire. Apart from the mundane sunlight/holy wafer/cross-in-your-face/spike-through-your-heart issues, you've got to deal with the fact that blood is toxic. A few teaspoons won't hurt — blood pudding is a delicacy for Brits, as is seal blood for the Inuit — but start drinking pints of the stuff (like real vampires do) and you risk haemochromatosis, or iron storage disease. We all need iron, of course — ask any anemic person. It's a necessary component of the hemoglobin that carries oxygen from your lungs to the rest of your body, hence the bright red color of arterial blood. However, we have a limited tolerance to excrete excess amounts — too much iron and your liver and nervous system go crazy. Unlike vampire bats, for instance, whose intestines have a filtering membrane which prevents overloading their bloodstream with iron.

This toxic message hasn't, apparently, reached the daily coachloads visiting Castle Bran, aka “Dracula’s castle,” in central Romania’s Transylvania. The official brochure insists that the 14th century structure has only a passing connection with Vlad Tepes III (c. 1430-1477), supposedly the model for Bram Stoker’s 1897 novel Dracula. But having separated Vlad from vampires, the brochure turns around and discusses his history in the context of vampirism. Not to mention all the kitsch — fangs, vampire mugs, the whole shtick — for sale at the castle entrance. I'm surprised Stoker's heirs haven't sued the Romanian tourism board for royalties.

The fact is Stoker, a Dubliner who made good in London (he managed Henry Irving, the most successful stage actor of his time), never refers to Vlad in his copious notes for the novel and only mentions him in passing in the book. In contrast to Count Dracula, Vlad was a very real person, three times voivode (prince) of Wallachia, popularly known as “the Impaler” after his chosen method of dispatching his enemies: slowly and painfully as they dangled on a pointed stake thrust from anus to mouth. In Romania, he's something of a folk hero, a master of psychological warfare who stopped the Turks from overrunning Wallachia and stripped the local Hungarian boyars (ruling class) of their power.

Vlad signed himself “Dracula,” meaning dragon, after the chivalric Order of Dragon founded by the king of Hungary as a mutual defense pact against the Ottoman Turks. Vlad's father had been invested into the order and, after his death, Vlad inherited the allegiance. And no, despite popular belief, dracula doesn't mean “son of the devil” in Romanian — that would be pui de drac.

So what is the connection between Vlad and Stoker's Count Dracula? According to literary scholar Elizabeth Miller, not much: “Stoker borrowed the name ‘Dracula’ and a few scraps of miscellaneous information about Wallachian history from William Wilkerson's An Account of Wallachia and Moldavia (1820).” We can be glad he did stumble on the name, though. Until then, his courtly villain had gone by the lisp-y name of Count Wampyr.

I wonder what Stoker would make of his creation today. Featured in more than 100 movies, thousands of books and a staple of Halloween costumes, Dracula is alive and well — practically immortal, in fact. Which, of course, is the whole point, if you're going to be one of the undead. ●

Barry Evans (barryevans9@yahoo.com) hates the taste of blood. In case you were wondering.
